Alternative radio ... College station offers 'new wave' rock music

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

Alternative radio is on the air. From a small basement studio on the Pomona College campus, KSPC sends out 3,000 watts of power into the airwaves, its music knocking heads with some of the biggest commercial stations in the Los Angeles area.

Affectionately known as "The Space" by its listeners and employees, the station is attempting to establish itself as the cutting edge of today's rock music.

Student-operated KSPC offers West End residents and those within a circle that extends from Pasadena to Riverside something different in the way of radio programming.

When students say their station is alternative, they mean just that. Songs heard on KSPC aren't likely to be heard on such middle-of-the-road stations as KWST or KMET.

Instead of a top 40 containing hits by Kim Carnes, Stars on 45 or George Harrison, the station's playlist of most requested songs is likely to include cuts from X, Stiff Little Fingers, Human Sexual Response or Squeeze.

"The students decided we should do something different," said station manager Penny Hunt, a junior at Pomona College. "We slanted toward new music and we give new artists a break."

The decision to switch from block programming that included chunks of classical and jazz music came last year when students felt the station's identity had become blurred.

"It was confusing," Hunt said. "You (the listener) never knew what to expect."

In addition, she said, there weren't enough students who knew much about jazz or classical to put on quality shows.

New wave music was chosen, Hunt says, because students they wanted to fill a void on the airwaves.

Not being allowed to air commercials comforts listeners, Hunt said, and provides the station with enough leeway to play music that other stations might not touch.

Originally launched as a four-hour-a-day classical station with 10 watts of power, KSPC alternated in the late 1950s and early 1960s between classical music and soft jazz.

However its signal barely reached downtown Claremont until Pomona College officials decided to invest in the new antenna. Hours expanded and programming changed during the 1970s.

Today during the school year over 100 students are involved in every aspect of operating the station. There are no faculty advisers thanks to a "hands off" policy on the part of the college administration.

A director of college radio was hired recently, however, to, according to Hunt, help students do what they do not have time for in operating the station.

Because none of the five Claremont colleges have communications departments, students receive no formal training from instructors. But as Hunt knows from holding the position as the station's training director, students who want to succeed can receive plenty of practical experience.

"It's a creative outlet," she said. "It gives them a chance to do something different."

Hunt and music director Kiki Ramos are frustrated at the lack of recognition their programming has received off campus. Other stations claim credit for "discovering" a new band long after that band's music has been on the KSPC playlist, they contend.

Another concern is finances. Raising money without commercial capability is a near impossibility. Students hope to raise $10,000 next year by soliciting donations from outside sources. Last year only $500 was raised.

In addition, plans have already been laid for more public information programs.

Ramos said the station has also had problems obtaining records from some companies that focus on commercial stations.

The problem, she said, is those companies view KSPC as just another student station and place it third or fourth on their priority list.

Despite the drawbacks, students at the station have had their share of exciting moments.

Although there are some restrictions on what music is played, deejays are relatively free to play what they want.

In addition, students get a taste of the music industry and can get involved with upcoming bands.

In one instance a band came to the studio for an interview and ended up in a mustard fight that left the studio splashed with yellow.

Recently, the local band Stepmother performed live in the KSPC studio.

"It was crazy," Hunt laughed. "We had the band in here, the amplifiers were out in the lobby and engineers were everywhere."

Quake readiness talks planned

Most Southern Californians are familiar with dire predictions about the immediacy of another major earthquake, but few families have taken the time to learn and put into practice an emergency plan in case disaster does strike.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in cooperation with the city of Upland, is sponsoring a program to help West End families prepare for a potential emergency.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 9, at the Mormon Church, 785 N. San Antonio Ave. in Upland.

The presentation, expected to last 1½ hours, will include background information on what might happen in case of a major earthquake, what the individual can do, what the community can do and how each family can prepare a special emergency kit which would provide food, water and other necessities.

Harvey Malkin, who is helping organize the program for the Mormon church, said the presentation has been adapted from a similar program presented in April in Redondo Beach.

"Public reaction to the idea was very good," said Malkin. "We're borrowing many of the same principles, and have invited a guest speaker from the Southern California Earthquake Preparedness Project."

Richard Andrews, acting director of the project, is an educator with a strong background in history and American culture. He has written books and articles on the role of professions in American society, the history of American film and television and modern American culture.

He will brief participants on what to expect during a major earthquake in terms of damage, and what may be done to minimize the danger to individuals.

Malkin will speak on Residential Emergency and Disaster Initiative (REDI), an extension of the Mormon philosophy which encourages the family to work as a unit and to prepare for self-sufficiency.

He will tell participants how to prepare a REDI pack, with food, water, clothing, first-aid supplies and other items to sustain the family for at least a 72-hour period.

In addition, Malkin will review the Family Emergency Procedural Sheet, a check list to help organize family members in time of emergency.

"The sheet helps establish responsibilities, like who will turn off the gas and water lines, who will be in charge of the pets, and who will bring the family's important documents," said Malkin. "We'll also discuss the Neighborhood Skills Inventory Sheet, to help people identify individuals in their local community who may be able to offer vital services in an emergency."

A third portion of the program will be presented by Upland City Manager Lee Travers, who will tell citizens just what the city can — and cannot — be expected to do in times of trouble.

"We of course hold occasional disaster drills," said Travers, "but I'll explain why the city can't be expected to completely take over in times of a disaster."

Malkin said tentative plans include the taping and reshooting of the program on local THETA cable television.

"We'll be inviting representatives from other local communities to attend," he said, "and Cal McElwain from the county board of supervisors will be there."

Trustees approve series of transfers

Although budgetary and enrollment constraints have necessitated cutbacks in staffing at the Upland School District, trustees want to ensure attrition — not layoffs — takes up the slack.

The teaching staff will be reduced by seven, and classified personnel by four, down from last year's figures.

Trustees approved a handful of reassignments at Tuesday's board meeting, part of the juggling process needed to sort available staff members into available positions.

As of that meeting, only two part-time aides are left without positions, having been "bumped" from their posts by those with more seniority.

Personnel director Charles Palmer said both aides would probably be offered jobs by the end of the summer.

"We have lots of positions for 2½-hour aides, and there is usually a high turnover in July and August," Palmer told trustees. "I don't think there will be a problem in finding an opening for either one of these people."

The two aides formally were assigned 5-hour and 3½-hour posts. Board member Rick Minnis expressed concern there be no staff layoffs, a desire indicated by trustees at the beginning of the summer when it became apparent cutbacks would have to be made.

Superintendent George Renworth said no teachers have been laid off yet.

"We're currently overstaffed (with teachers) but with attrition I expect it to work out by fall," he said.

"And there is always the possibility that enrollment, which is expected to go down, will pick up a bit and we'll have to hire more teachers."

Upland condos, office buildings approved

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

Growth and development appeared to be the theme of Monday night's Upland City Council meeting, as council members approved plans for two condominium projects and several office buildings.

The proposals were passed with virtually no discussion by a skeleton council, with Mayor John McCarthy and Councilman Frank Carpenter absent.

The two condominium proposals were both extensions of projects already approved for the northwest portion of the city. They necessitate vacation of portions of both 22nd and 23rd streets in conformance with the city's general plan for the area.

A conditional use permit and tentative tract map were approved for a 34-unit development proposed by Lesny Development on 9.4 acres south of 22nd Street just east of the city limits. Construction has already begun on the first phase of the project to the east.

A tentative tract map was also approved for a project proposed by Mark III Homes. A 32-acre parcel of land immediately north of the Lesny development was divided into 130 residential lots and eight common lots for recreational purposes.

The council also approved plans for a commercial/office project proposed by the McIntyre Co. for the northeast corner of Mountain Avenue and 11th Street.

Plans call for four office buildings and landscaping to include a large fountain in the middle of the complex.

Developers agreed to widen a portion of 11th Street to accommodate projected increases in traffic flow in hopes of lessening the impact on the already heavily traveled area.

A two-story office building will be constructed at the southeast corner of D Street and Euclid Avenue, across from the Upland City Hall. A house existing on the lot will be torn down and replaced with a 15,800-square-foot structure proposed by Berry Construction of Upland.

The council also approved two zone changes, one for the Upland Hills Country Club project located on 238 acres on both sides of 16th Street east of Campus Avenue. The original designation for "open space" was changed to "special land use."

Zoning was changed from single family residential to highway commercial supplemental use for 9.8 acres at the southeast corner of Arrow Highway and Mountain

Upland schools shift principals

Trustees of the Upland School District recently approved a shuffling of four principals in the district. The change will affect three elementary schools and one of the district's two junior high schools.

Roger Schulte, currently the principal of Valencia School, will become head of Pioneer Junior High School this fall. His former post will be taken over by Thomas Fine, principal of Upland Elementary School.

The Upland post will be filled by David Bardin, formerly head of Sierra Vista School. Richard Riley will leave as principal of the junior high to work at Sierra Vista.

There was no discussion on the decision, which passed on a vote of 3-1. Trustee Bob Ellis cast the dissenting vote.

Goldsmith started career teaching Navajo Indians

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Carol Ann Pierson of Rancho Cucamonga has what can be called a "gem of a job."

She is a goldsmith, a profession which does not boast of many women. Every day she sits at a bench in her tiny cubicle working with gold, diamonds, rubies, sapphires and numerous other jewels.

Pierson says she mounts gemstones, repairs other jewelry problems and occasionally, she has the opportunity to design ring mountings.

"Sometimes I think about how valuable this jewelry is that I am working with," she said as she waved her hand over the bench of gold rings with precious stones, gold watch bands and gold serpentine necklaces and bracelets. "But I'm in love with gemstones, especially diamonds! It's a joy to work with them."

With a pixie grin, Pierson said, "It's amazing the value people put on a piece of jewelry, like the woman with a little 10-point diamond who is concerned that her ring will not be lost ... and the customer who comes in and casually tosses her $50,000 diamond ring across the counter and walks out. That little 10-point is 100 percent more precious to its owner than the woman with the big stone."

"Of course, when you deal with an established jeweler who belongs to the American Gem Society, there's no reason for anyone to be concerned about the safety of their jewels," the pretty, 26-year-old jeweler said.

Carol said it is unusual to find a woman in her position, especially one so young. "When I started looking for a job in California, it wasn't easy convincing employers I was a qualified goldsmith ... and only 19 years old," she said.

But she did find jobs and admitted she hopped from one to the other until Don Wight in Ontario hired her from a resume. "That was four years ago and I'm still here," she said. "This is the longest I have been in any job, but I like it here."

Carol Pierson's profession actually started in Albuquerque, N.M., her home state, when "the Indian jewelry boom" hit. She joined with a friend to make silver beads for Navajo Indian squash blossom necklaces. She soldered thousands of beads.

"Matter of fact," Carol laughed, "we flooded the market. We had the largest collection in the country and we had to sit on those 20,000 silver beads for six months."

When Indian jewelry was at its height of popularity, Pierson said she had even taught some Navajos how to be silversmiths.

She also worked with a friend in Albuquerque who "taught me the real jewelry art." Pierson worked with him for a year and "did all the wealthy people's jewelry." From there she worked with another friend who "begged me back in the Indian jewelry business by working with gold and turquoise."

Pierson said, "I even made a collar for the dog, Benji!"

She was persuaded into coming to California with the friend to sell Indian jewelry at the Indian Show at the Exposition Center in Los Angeles. That was seven years ago, and "I never went back to Albuquerque," she said. After a few jobs, she came to work in Ontario. "I sent my resume everywhere and I guess it was just providence that I came here because I really like it," she said.

Pierson claims to be more of a craftsman than an artist. The only phase of her job which she finds monotonous is repairing the gold serpentine chains by the dozen.

She does wish there was more opportunity to meet customers — "When they do find out that a girl is the jeweler, they are quite surprised."

For eight hours a day, Carol Pierson works intently with her tools and little torch way back in the corner of a tiny cubicle.

To offset that confinement, she takes ballet lessons six nights a week. "Ballet gets me from a small area into a big area." She found going home to that "horrible TV" was becoming a habit, and since she "is madly in love with ballet," she started lessons four years ago.

"I'm too old to perform," she said. "It took me two years to get 'on point' (up on her toes)," she said. "I started too late and it's hard to deal with a stiff body." She also said ballet dancers not only need to be very young, but "you have to be a bone (skinny)."

Though she realizes she can never be a ballerina in the purest sense, Carol Pierson knows she can become a gemologist. She is studying by correspondence and has passed the diamond portion. She also has taken jewelry and gemstone courses with the Gemological Institute of America in Santa Monica.

Whether resetting a beautiful diamond or "on point" in her pink toe slippers, Carol Pierson shows determination to do her best in both worlds.

Student firms are honored

Members and advisers of the Inland Empire Junior Achievement Co., sponsored by the Bank of America in Upland, attended the annual Future Unlimited Night (FUN) on Hollywood June 19.

The Inland Empire group is made up of students from Chaffey and Upland high schools.

At FUN, sponsored by the Junior Achievement of Southern California, awards are given to top Junior Achievement winners throughout the Southland.

The Inland Empire Junior Achievement Co., known as Shirts, Etc., placed second in top company sales, earning more than $6,300 during the spring semester. Part of the profits from T-shirt sales went to pay for a 60-passenger bus to take members to FUN night.

Junior Achievement is one of the nation's oldest youth programs, providing high school students with knowledge of the American economic system.

It teaches the principles of private enterprise by helping students run their own miniature businesses during the school year. They actually own, operate and make decisions for the corporation. The students manufacture and sell a product, learn about marketing and advertising, develop leadership and communications skills.

AAUW honor women achievers

Louise McCullough was elected president for the 1981-82 term of the Ontario-Upland Branch of the American Association of University Women during the group's June meeting held recently at Red Hill Country Club, Cucamonga.

Serving with her will be: Beth Cummings, program vice president; Anne Kamansky, recording secretary; Mary Early, corresponding secretary; and Dorothy Eubank, membership treasurer.

Also honored at this meeting were the two recipients of AAUW's named grants to the Educational Foundation Program.

One of these was Barbara Hughbanks, who has served as recording secretary, vice president and president of the branch, as a prime force in sponsoring the Great Decisions program and as area representative for many study groups.

Karen Strauch, the second recipient, has served as topic chair for the groups: Women — Searching for Self and Women as Agents of Change.

She also was vice president and an active member of many study groups.

Receiving the AAUW's scholarship was Jennifer Carmean, a special education major who will attend San Diego State next year to continue her studies in deaf education.

This scholarship is given each year by the AAUW to a Chaffey

College student who to go on to obtain her master's degree in counseling of the deaf at Oregon State. She was also honored at this recent meeting.

The AAUW also presents an award each year to pay tribute to women who have given dedicated service to the community and who, through personal achievement, have had a role in elevating the status of women.

This year, the Status of Women award was presented to Bernice Bedford Conley, whose newspaper column, "Pages from the Past," is published each Sunday in The Daily Report.

The recipient is a relative of the Bedford Brothers, who in 1887, bought land from the Ontario Land Co. and laid out Upland.

Friends to hold 'First Social'

The "First Social" for the Friends of the Ontario City Library will be held from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Aug. 1 in the Ontario Civic Center Community building, 225 E. B St., Ontario (across the street from the library).

The public, members of the Friends and their guests are invited to attend. The donation collected will serve to promote special projects for the library and special programs for children and the community.

Featured will be entertainment including live music and popular recordings for dancing. Food and other refreshments will be served.

Reservations may be made by calling Teresa Lopez at the library, 988-8481, extension 7, or Florence Swanson, Friends secretary, at 628-8222 by Monday.

The Friends are interested persons of all ages who are dedicated to furthering the cause of the library and the community. Funds are raised through membership fees, book sales and special programs of interest to both the membership and residents of the West End.

The library has been a citizens' project by tradition from its inception in 1885 when a group of original settlers pooled their books and raised $40 to establish a library. This was three years after the founding of the Model Colony by the Chaffey brothers, George, William and Charles, in 1882.

The present Friends of the Ontario City Library was organized in 1947 by Alberta Schaefer, who was then the library director. It is still a citizens' project as she intended.

Overdue book charges go up

San Bernardino County library overdue book charges were raised July 1 with the approval of the Board of Supervisors.

The increase in overdue fines raises the rate from five cents a day to 10 cents a day, accruing to the cost of the materials.

Free legal help given by clinic

A free legal aid clinic specializing in civil, immigration and family law, except divorce, is scheduled to open in the West End Wednesday.

The clinic, which will be open from 6:30 to 9 p.m. every other Wednesday, is situated at Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish Hall, 5048 D St., Chino.

Appointments are not necessary, but anyone in need of legal counseling must arrive at the clinic between 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. The clinic, which is sponsored by the Mexican-American Commission of the Diocese of San Bernardino and the Inland Empire Latino Lawyers Association, is open to the general public.

Deputy pay measure to be voted on

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

A ballot measure tying future salary increases for sheriff's deputies and other law-enforcement officers to the consumer price index has qualified for the November ballot.

Jack Carr of the county Registrar of Voters office said a statistical sampling of the more than 3,000 signatures submitted found that enough signatures were valid.

The Sheriff's Employees Benefit Association, which is sponsoring the charter amendment, needed 21,310 signatures from registered voters living in San Bernardino County.

The county Board of Supervisors placed a charter amendment on the ballot last week to make the county clerk an appointed, rather than elected, position. That issue is Measure A.

SEBA's proposed charter amendment will be labeled Measure B "in all probability," according to the registrar's office. That designation awaits formal action by the board.

Carr noted that the board has first crack at writing a ballot argument, pro or con, on the measure. Supervisors so far have taken no position.

Recognized groups, such as SEBA, are second in line for submitting ballot arguments. Individuals may also submit arguments up to 300 words.

The deadline for submitting ballot arguments is Aug. 11. No fee is charged.

Physical fitness exercise important for babies

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

It was 1954 when exercise expert Bonnie Pruden approached President Eisenhower with information that children in the United States were not as fit as children in other countries.

Pruden and Dr. Hans Kraus, an orthopedist, had studied the fitness of children all over the world and determined that American's children were among the least fit. Some 58 percent of children in this country were not fit compared, as an example, with Brazil where 13 percent of the children were unfit.

President Eisenhower, with the aid of Pruden and Kraus, set up a Council on Youth Fitness which since has become the President's Council on Fitness and Sports. And Pruden's daughter, Suzy, who runs an exercise studio in New York and writes books about fitness, is a member of the council as a clinician specializing in preschool children.

"I'm a product of a physically fit household," says Suzy, now 38 and the author of six books on fitness. She talks in an interview about her newest workbook, created with her husband, writer Jeffrey Sussman, "Suzy Pruden's Pregnancy and Back-to-Shape Exercise Program," published by Workman Publishing.

Pruden said that her mother started exercising her as a baby. Exercising babies, as well as their mothers, is an important part of the new book. Photographic step-by-step illustrations go through such movements as arm-to-foot exercises for baby and mother. Many of the exercises are standard with names such as Pelvic Tilt, Kitty Stretch, Stem Life and Baby's Bicycle.

Pruden started an infant exercise program in New York City in 1966. She first wrote about exercising babies in 1972 with the publication of "Creative Fitness for Baby and Child." But it was only recently that the idea of exercising babies became popular in this country.

"Exercising your child and yourself simply is loving your child and loving yourself," says Pruden. "It's doing something wonderful for yourself and your child. And we only get one life, one body, so it's important to take care of it."

Growing up as the daughter of a famous exerciser wasn't easy, Pruden says.

"I'm 5 feet 4 inches tall and, at 17, I weighed 165 pounds," she says. "That was my way to get back at my mother. When you're the daughter of the nation's leading fitness expert, then you tend to find the weakest link. I had to get to be over 30 before I could realize that the weight was doing more damage to me than it was to her."

Now she weighs 115 pounds, Pruden says, although she sometimes picks up a few pounds from a binge of eating, say, three hot fudge sundaes at once. But then she'll settle back down to the Mayo diet on which she lives, grapefruit every meal, protein and vegetables only. She originally lost considerable weight through the Weight Watcher program.

But even at her highest weight, she was interested in exercise and gymnastics. She began offering an exercise program at home in Manhattan in 1965, and the Suzy Pruden exercise studio grew from that.

Now, Pruden and her husband are thinking of expanding nationwide, but are worrying about "quality control" and the ratio of one teacher per 10 adult students, or two teachers per 10 youngsters they like to maintain at the studio.

And she does not believe in using machines to exercise. "The body is the only tool you need," she points out.

Pruden works out her exercises through trial and error, she says, adding that any woman beginning exercises should first check with her doctor on the movements. If approved, the woman should exercise from 10 to 15 minutes per day, every day.

Pruden swims and does aerobic exercises as well as running occasionally, but only with her dog along in New York's Central Park where "even the muggers wear jogging shoes," she says. She and her husband also run on the beach in front of their summer home.

Tips on caring for your skin

The skin — the body's largest organ system — may also be the most misunderstood, a health educator at the University of Southern California believes.

Gail Walenga, an outreach nurse at the USC Health Center, has researched skin-care facts for the past two years to prepare for her campus lectures on "Skin and the Effects of Diet, Stress and Cosmetics" and for individual counseling with students.

Among the interesting bits of information she's discovered and dispensed:

— Allergy to cosmetics may masquerade initially as a cold, a runny nose or itchy, watery eyes. Allergy to cosmetics is fairly common. So is allergy to perfume, including the scents found in many cosmetics.

— Stress and heredity may influence facial skin flare-ups more than the type of foods eaten. Studies have shown that, in general, the kinds of food eaten aren't directly responsible for the presence or absence of acne, Walenga notes. "Your genes are probably at least partly to blame if you have acne."

Stress also plays a role in flare-ups. "When you undergo a lot of stress, your body's general response is to trigger more hormone activity," Walenga explains. The higher production of hormones — specifically, androgens and corticosteroids — is believed to be linked to acne flareups in susceptible individuals.

Of course heredity is not controllable, but control of stress is, Walenga notes. Once persons know that stress affects their skin, they can try to become more aware of stress and attempt to control it. Two more tips gleaned from Walenga's research: — Persons with skin blemishes are wise to choose water-based cosmetics over oil-based and to use powder-based blushers instead of wax-based.

— Expensive is not always better when it comes to cosmetics. You can generally get by with cheaper lines.

New directions and uses being found for colors

By HERB LAWRENCE
Copley News Service

Red, blue, green, yellow, orange, purple. If it weren't for colors such as these the world would be a less exciting place to live. Some may like the look of various colors but not think too much about what should be used to brighten up the outside and inside of buildings.

But a national color consultant says he believes that colors can significantly shape the interior feeling of a residence.

"Of all the elements that combine to create a beautiful home environment, color is probably the most powerful," said Dave Farrar, the national home-furnishings coordinator for Montgomery Ward.

"In many ways," said Farrar, "the tremendous impact of color is only now being fully realized. New, non-traditional styles of living have mandated a re-evaluation of how color is used in the home."

"Old, oversimplified rules — like dark colors diminish and light colors enlarge — are being cast aside or expanded," and new color directions are being discovered.

Recently, Farrar and a team of designers undertook a unique project which showed the importance of selecting and using the proper colors.

It was the conversion of a studio to a one-bedroom apartment.

"It has long been acknowledged that one of the most important aspects of color is its ability to visually change the characteristics of a living space," he said.

"In phase one of our design project, we faced the challenge of making a very limited area — a studio apartment — appear more spacious and more interesting."

"We did it with a continuous stroke of bold color that literally pushed the perceived horizons of the room beyond their physical limits."

The area, an L-shaped room typical of many studio apartments, was bordered on two sides by a series of large, single-paned windows divided by slender vertical beams.

According to Farrar, in order to unify both legs of the "L," all walls and windows (window beams) were painted a deep, rich brick red — one of this season's most fashionable shades.

For an uninterrupted color statement, mini-blinds in a lighter value of the same hue were hung in all of the windows.

"By ignoring the architect's attempt to give the illusion of two separate living spaces and by unifying the entire room with one color, we created the impression of a much larger, more open space," he said. "We also extended the room's living possibilities so the occupants weren't locked into using separate areas of the space for separate functions."

He suggested that the same idea can easily be applied to any irregular shaped room — or even to adjoining rooms.

"By joining areas together with a continuous flow of color," he said, "walls and arbitrary room divisions can almost disappear."

Careful color planning also can beef up design flexibility, make furniture and accessories more versatile and even ease the financial and physical challenge of moving from one home to another.

For a number of years, many designers have urged that carrying a basic color scheme throughout an entire home is a good idea — and with good reason.

"A consistent color treatment definitely gives a home a more unified look and eliminates the visual shock of going from one distinctly color-keyed room to another," he said.

A number of real estate people have been saying the same thing. They say a home with basically the same color in each room is easier to sell. Different colors from room to room aren't popular anymore, they argue.

According to Farrar, using compatible colors from room to room opens up many avenues when furnishings and accessories need to be rearranged.

"Should a person decide to install wall-to-wall carpeting in the living room, an area rug formerly used in this room can find new life in the dining room if the color tones in both areas are complementary," he said.

Diet may be a factor in crime

By DARLA WELLES
Copley News Service

Is it possible that certain food allergies can result in violent behavior?

Quite possible, according to Dr. Bernard Rimland, psychologist, researcher and director of the Institute for Child Behavior Research in San Diego.

Rimland, a specialist in children's behavioral problems, advocates the theory of orthomolecular therapy, which holds that imbalances in the brain caused by insufficient nutrients or excess toxins — alcohol, drugs, dangerous chemicals from the environment, or foods to which a person is allergic — can cause behavioral disturbances.

He estimated that as many as 60 percent of people suffering from a variety of afflictions — ranging from migraine headaches to learning disorders to outbursts of violence — may have problems that can be traced to allergic reactions to foods or exposure to environmental pollutants.

He further suggested that many of those disorders can be alleviated or cured by eliminating the toxins or supplying the needed nutrients to restore the body's natural, healthy balance.

While he did not suggest that nutritional imbalances or exposure to irritants are the only factors in the development of violent personalities, he said biochemical factors should not be overlooked in the search for causes and cures.

Conventional wisdom holds that allergic reactions are manifested only in physical terms, such as rashes, sneezing, difficulty in breathing and upset stomachs, he said.

That theory assumes that the brain is separate from the body and not subject to irritation by toxins or weakening by nutritional deficiencies.

Rimland, however, says the brain can be influenced by such factors, which he holds can cause inflammation, swelling and pressure or can dull or distort functioning of the brain's delicate communication system.

He said some of the most common toxins, besides alcohol, drugs and environmental chemicals, are those producing allergic reactions to a number of commonly consumed foods. Among those are milk, eggs, wheat, gluten, chocolate, corn, peanuts, sugar and the phosphates in preserved meats such as bacon.

Man must buy back daughter from baby-brokers

Copley News Service
ENSENADA, Baja California, Mexico — Alvin Neal stared from the windswept cliff of a front yard into the vast expanse of the Pacific, slowly shaking his head in disbelief.

Like others, he had scoffed at the reports that babies were sold to Americans or anyone else who had the money and wanted one.

The American retiree said his skepticism vanished the day he had to buy his own infant daughter back from baby-brokers.

"I never dreamed anything like this existed, and maybe I still wouldn't believe it if it hadn't happened to me," said Neal, his jaw tensing in anger as he recalled those events of nearly two years ago.

It started in 1978, Neal said, when he became romantically involved with 20-year-old Juana Chavez and — a few months later — she became pregnant.

While he was away on a

Rio Pescador fishing trip, Chavez gave birth prematurely to twins. Albino, a boy, and Bibiana, a girl, were born on May 16, 1979, at this city's general hospital.

"I'm very poor, and I didn't know if Alvin would be back," Chavez said. "You know, we aren't married or anything, and I wasn't sure where he was. My babies were sick and had to be kept in incubators. Besides that, I lost a lot of blood."

Faced with a hospital bill of nearly $100, Chavez said she went to see Ruben Appel, a land developer and member of a prominent Ensenada family, whom she says she knew slightly. As with other reports of questionable dealings with infants, the accounts vary widely as to what happened next.

Chavez says she asked Appel for help in raising money to cover the bill and to support herself until she could find a job.

"The truth is she came in here offering to give away the little girl," Appel maintains. He says he did promise her about $1,000 if she would give up Bibiana for adoption.

Chavez says she agonized over the offer for a couple of days. "My family, being poor, couldn't help," she says. "So I thought, 'Both of my babies are sick and might die. If I let one go, with the money I'll be able to save one of them, at least.'"

Once she reached her decision, she went back to see Appel. He told her that his sister, Olga Ruffo, would handle the adoption.

Appel and Ruffo came to see Chavez at her sister's home. Chavez says they had her sign a blank piece of paper and then Appel read her a statement saying that she agreed to relinquish custody of her daughter.

Chavez says she began crying and had doubts about the deal. Ruffo she alleges, told her: "Forget about this baby. Pretend that God has taken her."

Ruffo, who could not be reached for comment, said she had arranged many adoptions, Chavez says. Appel denies that.

Chavez says they took Bibiana and left about $400, but Appel says the amount was more like $900.

Whatever the price, the young mother told of the feelings of guilt that came the next day. "I couldn't sleep that night," says Chavez. "But my father said that even though I did something terrible, it was better than having both babies suffer."

Neal returned to Ensenada near the end of May and for a few days thought Juana had given birth only to Albino. Then Chavez confessed to what she had done.

"I was mad at her, but I was madder at those other people for taking advantage of the situation," Neal says. He decided the fastest way to get Bibiana back was to repay the $400.

Chavez asked Appel that her daughter be returned in exchange for the money. He said his $400 payment was channeled through Ruffo, although Appel denies that he or Ruffo received any money.

A meeting with Ruffo, Appel "and a couple of gringos" followed to work out details of the child's return. Neal says he waited outside.

Impatient at the length of the meeting, he says, he stormed into the house where they had gathered and threatened to call the authorities. "I had kept in the background all this time," Neal says, "and so they were surprised as hell to see a gringo come bustin' in."

Ruffo asked him to calm down, Neal says. He says he was told there had been complications — the couple who had Bibiana was upset at having to return the baby, especially after spending a lot of money on her. Moreover, he was told the infant was in the United States, he says.

"They were these real religious types," Neal says of those at the meeting. "and so they wanted us to pray. Well, I told them they'd better do some praying if I didn't get my kid back pretty quick."

There was no need to notify police, Ruffo assured him, because the child would be returned the next day, according to Neal.

When Neal showed up at Ruffo's home, she told him Bibiana would be delivered later. He says he insisted on waiting there.

"She picked up the phone and told someone in Spanish — she thought I didn't understand — 'Get the girl ready. Her father is here,'" Neal says.

Ruffo left and a few minutes later returned with Bibiana and gave her to Neal and Chavez.

Neal says he is sickened at the way his daughter was bartered, casually handed over to strangers.

Appel argues that Neal has exaggerated the story. "She (Chavez) is a little prostitute. I can take you to the bar where she works," says Appel.

"Now, for Al Neal to go around defaming my sister, one of the finest and most religious people here, is unforgivable. If I see him around I will tear him to pieces."

Alvin Neal and twins Virgen Bibiana Chavez and Albino Guadalupe Chavez.

"I want to emphasize that we took this baby out of an environment not fit for a pig and placed her with a good, decent, Christian family," Appel says. "When this woman changed her mind and asked for the baby, we tried to convince her to leave things as they were. Can you imagine the heartache it caused for the people who had already learned to love the baby?"

He admits there were no adoption proceedings. Neal concedes that Juana Chavez is a prostitute. "What's that got to do with the kids?" he asks. "How does that give anyone the right to buy babies?"

Baby oil to the rescue

Don't despair if your skin is dry

If you are troubled with dry skin, don't despair.

A prominent New York dermatologist says that there is a simple, inexpensive, at-home regimen that can help relieve the problem — and give your skin an important "moisture boost" at the same time.

"Dry skin is exactly that," says Dr. Frederic Haberman. "It's skin that has become brittle and flaky because it has lost its water content — and it's the moisture in skin that keeps it soft and supple."

But Haberman, who has offices in both Manhattan and Bergen County, N.J., says that frequent applications of water, coupled with immediate and generous uses of baby oil, can help meet the skin's thirsty demand for moisture.

"The baby oil helps to seal in water on the surface of the skin," he explains. "That's why it is important to apply it while the skin is still wet."

Cleaning the skin often is important, too, Haberman stresses. "Wash with a gentle soap or liquid cleanser at least twice a day and then rinse several times with lukewarm water. Splash on lots of water and while the skin is dripping wet, immediately apply the baby oil."

The dermatologist suggests keeping the moisturizer right on the bathroom sink. "The secret is to apply the oil immediately after washing, before the skin has a chance to dry."

Caring for the skin on a regular basis is also important, he emphasizes.

Rings enjoying a big renaissance

This year may well go down in history as the year of the ring, reports the Jewelry Industry Council, for the finger ring is enjoying a renaissance in popularity that it hasn't had since early times.

Men as well as women today wear engagement rings — his matches hers, but in a more masculine design. The newest ring fashion is the Romance Ring, named that because it is to be worn by single men and women who welcome Cupid's darts — and who may well be angling for that famous "third finger, left hand" diamond!

And of course, there is the popular Anniversary Ring, once known as the Eternity ring, which is given to wives whose husbands want to make it very clear that if they had it to do all over again, they would!

The history of rings goes so far back into antiquity that no one really knows when mankind first started wearing rings, but it is suspected that Neanderthal men favored the little circlets.

First to sketch the circle as a symbol of eternity, and to believe that the ring was a heavenly sign that life, happiness and love had no beginning or end, were the Pharaohs of Egypt.

Maximilian of Austria takes the honor of being the first man to give a diamond engagement ring to his beloved. In 1477, the young Maximilian, betrothed to Mary of Burgundy, had a special gold ring made with the initial 'M' in gold, one 'M' for Maximilian and another for Mary on the ring shanks. The large monogram 'M' was accented with diamonds.

It is true that from time to time before Maximilian there were 'betrothal rings,' but Max takes the credit for putting the diamond in engagement rings. For this, four out of five American brides say "Thanks, a million, Maximilian!" 75 percent of all new brides are given diamond rings when they become engaged, the council says.

School rings, popularized by West Point Midwives who give their girl friends their class rings as a token of affection, are enjoying a rebirth of fashion. New school rings are more lightly styled.

Where once the traditional ring carried only the graduation year and the school emblem, new rings include the wearer's name on the ring shank, and often have the wearer's birthstone as well as the school name on the ring.

Claremont Police Department Sgt. Ted K. Whitall displays Neighborhood Watch Program sign which has been approved by the City Council. Program will begin in city on a trial basis.

Neighborhood Watch program begins in Claremont on trial basis

By VONNE ROBERTSON
Staff Writer

Claremont is starting a Neighborhood Watch program on a trial basis.

Meetings are being planned in several neighborhoods to explain the project, according to police Sgt. Ted K. Whitall, program coordinator.

The Claremont City Council has approved the program, which includes posted signs, but suggested that smaller signs would be more in keeping with the city's landscaping and signage concepts.

The National Neighborhood Watch program was established by the National Sheriffs' Association in Washington, D.C., in an attempt to involve community residents across the nation in reducing the rate of burglaries and robberies.

"One out of every three people in the United States will be the victim of some type of crime in the next year," Whitall said. "That's getting out of hand."

Whitall said the signs would be posted at each end of the street where a program is established. In addition, small decals are available for house windows.

"We don't want to overkill an area but we need to draw attention to the fact that neighbors are watching out for each other in these areas," Whitall added.

During the past 18 months, Whitall and other officers from the Claremont Police Department have been meeting with neighborhood groups, senior citizen groups, women's clubs, service clubs and schools to discuss home security.

"Once neighbors are aware of what to watch for and people have a better idea on how to protect a home, the burglary rate can be reduced," the sergeant noted.

According to the Whitall, once a Neighborhood Watch program is established, someone is selected to be a leader. Children as informed that this person will provide a haven for them if necessary, much like a block parent.

Others actually patrol neighborhoods several times a day. In addition, each person on the block becomes aware of cars which may not belong in the area, peddlers going from door-to-door, people loitering in the area or other signs of unusual activity.

"We urge people who see anything out of the ordinary to call the Police Department," the officer explained. "And we are encouraged by the number of calls which have come into the department since we started our educational program. We don't want people trying to approach a stranger themselves. Instead, call an officer."

Whitall said some neighborhoods may not wish to form a formal group, but should have meetings to be informed about protection of property.

The Neighborhood Watch program includes several brochures on how to protect a home, what to do before leaving on a vacation, stickers and other material.

A vacation house — or one that appears to be vacant — is an appealing target to a burglar, Whitall pointed out.

Neighborhood Watch programs have already been established in Pomona, Montclair, Upland and Ontario. Other valley cities are considering the project.

Claremont residents interested in neighborhood meetings are asked to call Whitall at the Police Department, 624-4531.

Men are unaware

'Cherishing' is a long lost art

By CHERYL BRASS
OKAMOTO

Copley News Service

Somewhere between the feminist movement and society's pace, a counselor says, the art of romance — of "cherishing" — got lost.

Jean Jost, a family and marriage counselor, says she came to that conclusion after talking with more than 200 women through her practice.

But the problem, she adds, is that men aren't aware of the loss.

"Through my counseling, I hear a great number of women saying how they'd like to be treated and cherished," said Jost, who has been practicing for about four years.

"But at the same time I have men telling me they are lost on how to treat them."

Jost said many people still consider men and women almost different species — and in a sense, she said, they are right.

"To men, women are an unknown area — foreign ground. They are uncertain on how to approach them," she said.

But Jost is quick to point out that men and women basically all want the same thing — it's the approach that's different.

"I see a lot of marriages where it's the little things that count — the flowers every so often, dinner out on occasion, making the woman feel more attractive," Jost said.

Jost, married with four children, received her master's degree from Pepperdine University in Los Angeles and is working toward her doctorate at International College in West Los Angeles.

For Jost, cherishing a mate means acting out traditional roles: she takes care of the house and he takes care of her.

"Not every man has the money to bring home flowers every Friday night, or go out to a nice restaurant or buy fancy clothes, although those are nice," she said.

"But I do believe in candlelight, soft music and dinner out as much as possible, even if it's to the little Chinese restaurant around the corner."

Men, she contends, "see love and cherishing by the women in terms of taking care of their clothes and house."

Also, the participation in men's activities — like watching a football game — really shows cherishing and love.

"These are just small differences. Essentially we all need to be loved and cared for and nurtured."

Feminists may agree with Jost that some of the differences she talks about stem from attitudes learned in childhood, but that is where their agreement ends.

"Men were brought up to achieve, with priorities being how pretty their wife is, what kind of car they drive and how much money they make," Jost said.

"The woman is brought up to be the nurturer, taking care of others. Despite the feminist movement, these roles are still very much here."

Jost said most men have become so preoccupied with work and outside activities that cherishing has become a lost art.

"We all get so busy we don't stop and listen. If there's something women have said to me once, they've told me a million times: 'if only he would listen and hear who I am.'"

A tangy, fruit-flavored barbecue sauce is delicious on chicken. It's special zip comes from combining Worcestershire sauce and orange juice concentrate. Fruited barbecue sauces add a change of paste from the standard bottled tomato-y sauces and are good over chicken, pork chops or ribs.

For a change of pace

Fruited barbecue sauces are spiced up with Worcestershire

If you'd like to use something a little different from a bottled tomato-y sauce at your next barbecue, try making a tangy fruit - flavored sauce.

It's perfectly delicious over chicken, pork chops or ribs, and so easy to make using prepared fruit mixtures plus the time - saving seasoning, Worcestershire sauce. "Worcester" sauce is a blend of some 27 ingredients, all mixed and aged to produce a zippy, but well rounded taste.

Zesty Orange Barbecue Sauce takes virtually no time to prepare. Using a can of orange juice concentrate out of the freezer as a base, it gets its zip from Worcestershire with dashes of light brown sugar and garlic powder. There's no cooking necessary.

An Hawaiian - flavored Barbecue Sauce is easily created by combining pineapple preserves and Worcestershire and a sprinkling of lemon juice and ginger. This is a natural partner to ham steak when broiling or baking. And it's lovely with spareribs.

Zesty Orange Barbecue Sauce
1 can (6 oz.) frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed
1/2 cup Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon light brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
In a small bowl combine orange juice concentrate, Worcestershire sauce, sugar, salt and garlic powder. Use to baste chicken parts during last 20 minutes of barbecuing or baking. Yield: 1 1/4 cups

Hawaiian Barbecue Sauce
1/2 cup pineapple preserves
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
In a small saucepan combine pineapple preserves, Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice and ginger. Cook, uncovered, over low heat until preserves melt, about 2 minutes. Brush over ham steak during last 5 minutes or barbecuing or baking. Yield: About 1/2 cup.

Good food - ethnic style featured in cookbook

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

As Mary Poulos grew up in an Italian neighborhood in the coal - mining town of Hanna, Wyo., she never thought she might become a chef and ethnic food authority.

She intended to be an opera singer, and music was the great interest in her life until she married Larry Wilde, a performer and humor writer.

"That was when I began to pull out family recipes," said Mary. "My father was Greek, my mother was Swedish and she had a fine collection of Danish recipes as well as Swedish."

She decided to put the best recipes in a cookbook. A "lovely and refreshing" menu for a summer picnic or backyard buffet could be Jamaican fried chicken, tropical fruit salad with chili and lime dressing, and banana bread. These are her recipes.

Tropical Fruit Salad with Chili and Lime Dressing

2 large, ripe but firm papayas, peeled, seeded and cut into cubes

2 large greenish bananas, peeled and sliced

1 1/4 cups fresh pineapple

1 large orange, peeled, seeded, white membrane removed and coarsely chopped

1/3 cup peanut oil

3 to 4 tbsps. fresh lime juice

2 tbsps. chili powder

Salt to taste

Sugar to taste

Combine fruit in glass

salad bowl. In a blender whirl peanut oil, lime juice, chili powder, salt and sugar until smooth and thick. Pour immediately over fruit and toss gently. Chill before serving. Makes six to eight servings.

Jamaican Fried Chicken

2 fryers, 2 to 3 lbs. each, cut in eighths

1/4 cup dark Jamaican rum

3 tbsps. peanut oil

1/4 cup dark soy sauce

1 egg white

2 slices (one-fourth inch thick) fresh ginger, minced

Flour for breading

Peanut oil for frying

Shortening

Wipe the chicken pieces with a clean damp towel and place them in a deep, glass mixing bowl. Combine the rum, peanut oil, soy sauce, egg white and ginger and pour over the chicken. Cover loosely and marinate for about two hours, turning pieces once or twice. Drain each chicken piece momentarily. Roll pieces in flour and shake off excess. Fry in about 1 inch of hot oil with a little shortening added, until the chicken is tender and nicely brown on all sides. Serves six to eight.

Caribbean-style banana bread

1/2 cup of butter

1/2 cup well packed brown sugar

1 egg, well beaten, at room temperature

1/4 cup Jamaican rum

1 tsp. vanilla extract

2 cups all-purpose flour, unsifted

1 tsp. baking powder

1/2 tsp. soda

1/2 tsp. salt

3/4 tsp. grated nutmeg

1 1/4 cups mashed, very ripe bananas

1/2 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

1/2 cup white seedless raisins (optional)

1/2 cup fresh, shredded coconut (optional)

Cream butter and sugar together. Beat in the egg until light and fluffy. Stir in rum and vanilla. Sift all dry ingredients together. Add to the butter - sugar mixture, alternately with the mashed bananas, mixing well after each addition. Fold in the nuts and either coconut or raisins. Pour into a well - buttered and floured loaf pan and spread batter evenly. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for about one hour and 15 minutes, until the bread shrinks from the sides of the pan and a straw inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool for about 30 minutes in the pan, then unmold and completely cool on a rack. Wrap tightly in plastic wrap or waxed paper and foil. Serve at room temperature with plenty of sweet butter, makes one loaf, 9x5x3 inches.

Gun system does well in test

Phalanx, the radar-controlled, automatic gun system developed and produced by General Dynamics Pomona Division, has scored impressive results in a fleet firing exercise conducted on board the aircraft carrier USS Coral Sea, the firm has said.

Numerous hits were scored against a TDU-22 towed target. The target, seven inches in diameter, simulated an attack missile.

This exercise was the latest in a series of Phalanx firings by units installed aboard the aircraft carriers USS America and the USS Coral Sea, and the cruisers USS Biddle and the USS England.

The Navy has said it plans to place Phalanx on over 240 ships.

All U.S. Navy Phalanx systems have been installed with the assistance of a Pomona Division team of engineers which has been in the field since October, 1979.

These engineers have also supported installation of Phalanx on board ships of two other nations: Saudi Arabia and Japan.

Recently successful tracking exercises were conducted aboard two Royal Saudi Naval Forces (RSNF) ships, the AS SADDIO Saudi Arabia and the AL FAROUQ Saudi Arabia. Four other RSNF ships have Phalanx installed or are waiting for the system to be installed.

Bring on the beans and mix with imagination for easy summertime main dishes such as Meatball Bean Pockets that satisfy and save money at the same time.

Penny-wise patio treat

Where is it written that pork and beans must be served with franks?

Down with food stereotypes that stifle creativity! Instead try three exciting ideas that use old favorites in new and economical ways; ideas like these main-dish recipes which pair pork and beans with ground beef or Italian sausage. The results are protein-stretchers with sophisticated zing.

Since these dishes are casual yet stay warm, they are especially appropriate for summer season's comings and goings. At the sight of that last hungry wanderer, you're ready to sit down to a penny-wise patio treat.

Meatball Bean Pockets are tangy and satisfying, just right for the season.

Meatball bean pockets

1/2 pound ground beef
1/4 cup Italian-flavored bread crumbs
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1 cup green pepper strips
1/2 cup sliced onion
2 tablespoons shortening
1 can (16 ounces) pork & beans in tomato sauce
1/2 cup chopped tomato
1/4 cup ketchup
4 large pita bread
Mix thoroughly beef, bread crumbs, egg and mustard; shape into 24 meatballs. In skillet, brown meatballs and cook green pepper and onion in shortening until tender; pour off fat. Add pork and beans, tomato and ketchup. Heat; stir occasionally. Cut each pita bread in half, forming 2 pockets. Fill with meatball mixture. Makes 4 servings.

Beans and sausage brasilia

1/2 pound mild Italian sausage, cut in 1/2-inch pieces
2 cans (16 ounces each) pork & beans in tomato sauce
1 cup diagonally sliced banana
1 can (about 8 ounces) lima beans, drained
2 tablespoons molasses
In skillet, cook sausage until done; pour off fat. Add remaining ingredients. Heat; stir occasionally. Makes about 5 1/2 cups, 4 servings.

Farmstead skillet

1/2 pound ground beef
2 cups shredded potatoes
1 cup sliced onion
2 cans (16 ounces each) pork & beans in tomato sauce
1/4 cup ketchup
In skillet, brown ground beef (stir to separate meat); pour off fat. Add potatoes and onion. Cook over low heat until tender. Stir in beans and ketchup. Heat; stir occasionally. Makes about 5 1/2 cups, 4 servings.

Food for hikers

As every backpacker soon learns, one of the greatest challenges of the sport has nothing to do with hiking. Eating well on the trail, it is discovered, is a skill that requires as much or more planning than the route to be hiked.

The hitch is that every ounce of food must be carried over many miles, and with visions of those final long miles of trail in mind, backpackers very often let nutrition slip to the bottom of the priority list.

But, according to Lesley Fels, registered dietitian at Valley Children's Hospital in Fresno and an experienced backpacker, nutritious foods can be light in weight, too. "And," she adds, "they needn't be the expensive freeze-dried variety."

She explains that the key to selecting easily available foods which meet both these criteria is a basic understanding of what dietitians call nutrient density.

"Basically," says Fels, "the nutrient density of a food is the quantity and quality of nutrients which are needed for healthy growth and maintenance of the body in relation to the calories it provides." She adds that backpackers concerned with getting the most out of the foods they carry should select those which have a high ratio of nutrients to calories

Fish has aura of glamour

Fish, an ancient and unpretentious food, has taken on an aura of glamour among nutrition and calorie conscious Americans, according to the California Dietetic Association (CDA), Inland Empire Area District.

"Not only does fish provide a high - quality protein, but an average three ounce serving of most varieties contains approximately one - third the calories of an equal amount of red meat," says Mary O. Pitt, RD, president of CDA.

"It is also comparable in vitamin content to red meat," she adds. "All fish contains significant amounts of vitamins B1, B2 and niacin and canned fish such as salmon and sardines provide an excellent source of calcium when the soft edible bones are also consumed."

"A three ounce portion meets the criteria for one serving from the meat group of the four food groups - milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, breads and cereals," according to the CDA leader.

"Fish has other advantages," Pitt adds. "It's extremely digestible and quick and easy to prepare. A fresh fillet can be broiled in mere minutes, for example."

"Fish is also available in all areas of the country and can be purchased fresh, frozen, canned or in a shaped and breaded form such as fish sticks."

The adaptability of fish as a main course or a snack further adds to its appeal, according to Pitt. "Fish can be broiled, baked, pickled, fried or poached and garnished as simply or elaborately as you want. And it can form the basis for soups, hors d'oeuvres, casseroles, salads and sandwiches."

"And heavy cream sauces used in cooking or as an accompaniment should also be avoided," Pitt says. "Fresh lemon wedges served with broiled, poached or well - drained canned fish add plenty of zest for most people."

with food," she also suggests.

A knowledge of nutrition enables individuals to change their eating habits and diet, and to decrease calorie intake with age. A teen-ager may require 2,000 calories a day whereas a 60 year old may require only 1,500.

Dr. Camitta recommends more physical activity and fewer sedentary habits such as watching TV, which encourages snacking. She also states, "We can support and help the female patient whose weight loss, regardless of how well she adheres to diet, is slower than the male counterpart, and to remember how it will vary so much with the menstrual cycle."

Start obesity program early

An obesity prevention program should start with the newborn infant, according to Pennsylvania physician Francine D. Camitta, M.D.

Writing in a journal for occupational health nurses, Dr. Camitta recommends watching infants and children for rapid weight gain. "Reward them with hugs and kisses rather than with food," she also suggests.

A knowledge of nutrition enables individuals to change their eating habits and diet, and to decrease calorie intake with age. A teen-ager may require 2,000 calories a day whereas a 60 year old may require only 1,500.

Santa Fe's origins make it the most foreign of American cities

By NEIL MORGAN
Copley News Service

SANTA FE, N.M. — This is the only capital in the 50 states where each day passes uncluttered by the landing of a single airliner. Local citizens voted down a bond issue to link some of their tax funds with federal money to bring the Santa Fe airport up to standard.

On the playing courts of the Kiva Club, a squash club that reflects some of the Eastern toniness of Santa Fe, a Manhattan expatriate told me in great glee how the last time David Rockefeller flew here in his own jet, it dropped a wheel into a runway chuckhole and the great man had been delayed for hours while his plane was jacked up.

But for visitors who manage to get here (Amtrak's Southwest Limited stops 25 minutes and 17 miles away at Lamy, and at Albuquerque), Santa Fe comes close to offering all things to all people.

Because of its origins it is the most foreign city in America. At a time when travel costs are soaring, Santa Fe offers a chance to seem to go abroad without the cost and inconvenience.

TV Westerns would be even more awkward if the name first given to the capital of New Mexico by Spanish explorers in 1609 had lasted.

It was called La Villa Real de la Santa Fe de San Francisco de Assisi, which translates as The Royal City of the Holy Faith of St. Francis of Assisi. The only part that stuck was Holy Faith. With that name, Santa Fe made good, and the town became the Western terminus of the Santa Fe Trail that helped to open the West. A street called Old Santa Fe Trail still leads toward the Central Plaza, where the stages once pulled up.

In 1610 a Spanish governor, Don Pedro de Peralta, had built the Palace of the Governors, which remained a seat of government under five successive flags until 1910. Most recently, it's been in the courts in a test of whether Indians, native Spaniards, or ersatz versions of either have the concession to sell jewelry along its block-long portal.

In 1960 the Palace appeared on a 1.25-cent stamp as the oldest public building in the United States.

This stunned some in the East, but Santa Fe was settled before Boston or New York, and to the delight of many who live here, it's never quite caught on.

But along winding, rural Canyon Road are art galleries (Seth's Canyon Gallery is operated by the 26-year-old daughter of a U.S. Circuit Court justice) and restaurants, antique shops and crafts studios. Nearer the plaza are superb restaurants. At La Tertulia, aging proprietor Willie Ortiz has converted a convent into a shrine of northern New Mexico's chili-hot cuisine, and shares with patrons a lifetime collection of Latin religious art. The Inn at Loretto is a new adobe-style hotel that rises in hunks beside a graceful old chapel with an unsupported spiral staircase that some natives still believe was built by St. Joseph.

In winter there is skiing close by in the Santa Fe Basin, to the south on Sandia Mountain and about 100 miles north in the Sangre de Cristos above Taos. In summer there is the notable Santa Fe Opera (a year-round freeway sign warns OPERA TRAFFIC KEEP RIGHT), and this summer British and American writers and actors will gather at Taos and Santa Fe in a festival on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the death of the British author D.H. Lawrence, who lived on a ranch near Taos and is buried in New Mexico.

The festival president is Greer Garson, a Santa Fe resident. She is one of many who are generous in support of the arts, which have been a tradition of the region since long before the coming of the Anglo, as all but native Spaniards are known here. Anthropologists of the Southwest gather in seminars at the School of American Research, where 6,000 magnificent Indian artifacts are displayed in a private museum.

The school is housed in a hillside huddle of adobe which from the exterior seems, like most of Santa Fe, without pretension. But inside the main house, with its 20-foot-high sitting room and balconied boardroom, once the dining room, comes a glimpse of the Santa Fe style that distinguishes many fine old homes in the city.

The origins of the school, presided over by Dr. Douglas W. Schwartz, a Yale-trained anthropologist, form the kind of story that, in steady repetition, has made Santa Fe a haven for the wealthy, the bohemian, the intellectual and those simply seeking a gracious style of privacy.

Two sisters, Martha and Elisabeth White, the daughters of a onetime New York Times editor, were en route from New York by train in 1923 to view a total eclipse of the sun at San Diego. They left the train at Lamy for three days — to have their hair done, the locals insist — and were so taken by Santa Fe that they returned here to live.

The White sisters willed their estate to the School of American Research, and scholars from across the nation, Europe and Asia gather in the sisters' former home for week-long seminars. Faculty members have been involved in digs at prehistoric sites throughout the Southwest.

The cathedral at Santa Fe, N.M., is the work of Bishop Jean Baptiste Lamy, who began construction of the edifice in 1869 in the Romanesque style of his native Auvergne.

Master gardener

By JUDY GARRETT

DEAR MASTER GARDENER:

Q. Every year I plant petunias and they look beautiful but by mid-summer they get leggy. How can I prevent it this year?

A. When plants are about six inches high, pinch them back to promote side branching. You may also want to prune the foliage freely three or four times during the summer to keep the plants bushy. If the plants are healthy, you can also rejuvenate them in late summer by shearing them back about half their height, fertilizing and watering well. Your plants will have renewed vigor.

Q. Why do the leaves on several of my gold dust plants get large dark brown spots and then die? Those in sunlight suffer most.

A. Your plants are being sunburned. The gold dust plant requires shade from hot sun and does well even in deep shade. Move your plants to a location where they will get shade and protection from the wind.

Q. I have moved into a home that already has a herb garden. I have never used fresh herbs. Do I use the same amount as I would use of the dried?

A. The flavor of herbs intensifies when the plant is dried. Generally, when fresh herbs are used, use twice as much as the dried amount called for in your recipe.

Q. I have planted crookneck squash and zucchini in my garden. When do I plant winter squash?

A. Both summer and winter squash grow in the summer. The differences between them relate to harvest and storage. Summer squash is eaten when immature, but winter squash must be mature to be eaten. Winter squash requires a longer period to reach maturity. Storage quality is also different. Summer squash remains fresh for several days after harvest and winter squash can be stored for several weeks or months.

Q. Why do the leaves on my prayer plant no longer fold up at night? Also the tips of the leaves are turning brown.

A. Insufficient water encourages brown tips on the leaves of the prayer plant. This plant needs consistently moist soil most of the year. It can be allowed to dry slightly between waterings in the winter. Once the plant is healthy again, it should start folding its leaves at night.

Q. Will pruning some old large boxwoods make them bush out?

A. Unfortunately, few growth buds are found on old wood. Established boxwoods usually will not fill out well if cut back. You may want to put out some small shrubs to replace the old plants gradually.

School gets grant

A check for $3,700 is presented to the Rev. William R. Hampton, principal of Lutheran High School, La Verne, center, by Gary Thomasser, district representative of Aid Association for Lutherans (AAL), left, and Bob Burth, AAL management assistant, right. The grant is part of AAL's high school enrichment program. The money will subsidize tuition and related fees for 18 teachers seeking advanced degrees.

'Unknown Quantity' to appear

The "Unknown Quantity" singing group will present its program of southern gospel jazz, blues, dixieland, bluegrass and country music with the mellow sounds of contemporary soft rock and ballad styles, on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Valley Community Drive-In Church, Lone Hill Avenue and Covina Boulevard, San Dimas.

The community is invited. A free-will offering will be accepted to help the Unknown Quantity continue its August tour of the midwest.

Youths may sign up for camp

Junior high and senior high youth can sign-up for a week of camping at Alpine Camp near Lake Arrowhead. Three one-week sessions will be offered from Sunday through Aug. 22. The sessions are sponsored by the Alpine Center and Evangelical Covenant Churches of California.

Activities for the week include classes in baseball, arts, crafts, swimming, archery, nature, and the Christian lifestyle.

The cost is $81 per week because the Evangelical Covenant churches pay the other half of the total cost per youth. The camps are open to all youth regardless of religion or race.

Registration forms may be picked up at the Covenant church, 9284 Baseline in Rancho Cucamonga, or from any Evangelical Covenant church in your area. Forms may also be received by mail from Alpine Center P.O. Box 155 Blue Jay, Calif. 92317.

For more information call the Vineyard Covenant Church, 987-4511 or the Alpine Covenant Conference Center, 714-337-6287.

LOOK WHAT YOU GET IN 4 MINUTES FOR 75¢

1. Warm soft water wash at a safe effective pressure to clean your car, with loads of custom car wash soap;
2. High quality hand-held brushes which put out mountains of rich foam to whisk away road grime;
3. Cool soft water rinse to quickly remove soap;
4. Hot custom spray wax to make your car shine.

Next comes the best service we offer. A cool de-ionized water, spotless no-wipe rinse. That's right, use this as a final rinse and you can drive right into the sun and wind and your car will dry without spots! This makes cleaning your own car fun, and, it also takes very little of your time. You can also use our D.I. rinse when your car is not really dirty (instead of washing it).

Also in every bay are safe low pressure chemical de-greasers — great for cleaning your motor and excellent for motor-cycles.

Our vacuums are the best in town and we offer a full line of vended car care products — plus two bill changers.

We guarantee all of our services and products to work right for you 100% of the time. Come on by and see us!

"Click."

The sun's rising, and as it rises so does the demand for electricity. As the day grows hotter, air conditioners and other appliances click on in homes, stores and factories. The electric load soars... far beyond normal demand. You can help lighten this load—and delay building expensive new generating facilities—by clicking off appliances during afternoons, when demand peaks.

Please.

HOLLYWOOD — Wouldn't you just love to pour a bucket of caffeine up Robert Young's nose?

The husband and wife are having a good old-fashioned family brawl in the kitchen, he with the bread knife raised, when in walks Young with a cup of caffeine-free coffee, ready to solve the problems of maintaining peace in the American home.

The other coffee commercial is just as unbelievable. The judge invites the pretty young lawyer into his chambers to settle their differences over a cup. She yells, "Whoa!" when he's pouring and he says, "What's the matter, counselor, don't you like my coffee?" She says, "I love the rich taste. It's the caffeine I can do without."

Chances are she'll lose the case for her client. How can anybody believe that the most beautiful blonde at the party turns out every eligible male in the room just because she dares to scratch her head? He's making his approach when she scratches and he says to himself, "Oh, oh, dry scalp. That could mean dandruff." That party's over for the otherwise winsome guest.

The theme, with variations, is repeated on a bus and in an elevator.

The pitches for corn-oil margarine aren't thrilling, either. The crusty New England Grant Wood Gothic type who brags to his customers, "Tastes like Pruitt grew it," is a prize pain in the you-know-where.

Even more of an irritant is the Indian maiden whose corn-oil margarine wouldn't melt in her mouth. It's obvious she hates all palefaces when she tells us, "We call it maize, what you call corn." How does she know what we call corn at our house?

Then there is the hand cream that is supposed to remove those ugly age spots, what most people call "liver spots." The unreal part is that the woman demonstrating the cream is a 30ish knockout propped up in bed, wearing a sexy pink thing. She never had a real liver spot in her young life.

The stupid young couple that continually loses their traveler's checks ought to be kept at home, locked in an upstairs room so they'd stay out of trouble. They are always running to some hotel servant or tour guide who is obliged to tell them to call the local traveler's check office, something that, apparently, never occurs to them on their own.

There are certain commercials that win the most boring award hands down, perhaps because the nature of their products does lend itself to imagination. Those are the commercials for headache pain, asthma, dentures and to help shrink hemorrhoidal tissues.

Who among us has not been tempted to make loud noises while everybody is frozen, listening for advice from that brokerage house?

Properly done, the television commercial is a true 30-second art form, as sharp ad agencies and creative people have proved over the years. You get entertained, hooked and then hit with the pitch — and you take it.

Who cannot love Mariette Hartley and James Garner in the instant-camera commercials? They bicker so beautifully that much of the nation forgot that they're actors, that they're really not married. Chances are they're selling a potful of cameras with their lively patter. She puts him down so beautifully that her television career blossomed.

Rodney Dangerfield's flaky jock friends in the beer commercials — Billy Martin, Boog Powell, George Steinbrenner, Dick Butkus, Bubba Smith, et al — what fun they are to watch. And then they bring the whole crowd together for a class reunion photo. When Martin acts up, Steinbrenner says, "Knock it off, Billy, you need this job."

Bill Cosby is so good with children, black or white. Often they are a pain on television commercials, like the little guy who sits on the end of the dock and sings about his hot dog. But Cosby can put a couple of kids at the kitchen table and turn them into wide-eyed gigglers that anybody could love.

W Covinan placed at top of dean's list at MSAC

Matt Ebner, West Covina, placed at the very top of the Mt. San Antonio College spring dean's list with a perfect 4.0, "A" grade point average in a whopping 20 credit units. He is a geology major.

A June graduate of the college, Ebner starred in cross country, and track and field, both at Bishop Amat High School and at MSAC. He was chosen "Valley Leather Luger of 1978," placed first in MSAC's annual Cross Country Invitational, and broke the college's record in the 3,000m steeplechase at this year's state track and field championships with a 9:01.21, placing fourth in the state, and helping his team capture second in the state.

Ebner has won numerous scholastic and athletic awards at the college, including being named one of the 24 top "Students of Distinction" this past May.

The dean's list includes 1,048 students who have completed 12 credit units or more with a 3.0, "B" gpa or better. A normal semester unit load is 16.

Eleven students, including Ebner, earned perfect 4.0s while carrying more than 16 units.

Local students include Bonnie J. Kellogg, La Verne; and Colleen A. Stacy, Claremont, both earned straight "As" in 19 units. Sandra L. Dalton, Rowland Heights, was an "A" student with 18 units. Perfect scores in 17 units were earned by Jolan M. Hasko, Walnut; Timothy D. Schulze, Pomona; and David J. Wilson, Walnut. James R. Austin, La Verne, made all "As" in 16.5 units.

Another ten students earned the magic 4.0 in 16 units: Juanece I. Atkinson, Pomona; Eric L. Grundy; Hacienda Heights; Patricia A. Newton, Diamond Bar and William B. Rice, Pomona.

Area spring dean's list students include:

New concept not the answer

By VERNON E. JORDAN JR.

Copley News Service

The administration is pushing its concept of a "new federalism" with vigor. Its centerpiece is lumping the bulk of federal social welfare programs into block grants to the states.

This is justified on a number of grounds. It is alleged that state and local officials are closer to the problems, and are better able to determine which programs fit local needs, and that they can deliver those services more efficiently.

That's the official justification, and it is wrong.

The federal government got into the business of providing social programs because of two realities. First, they are necessary for the nation's security and well-being. Second, the states either did not or could not meet those needs.

State and local governments are closer to the people and the problems. That is why most federal programs are actually run by those governments. They apply for inclusion in the programs and administration them under federal guidelines.

Those guidelines he, keep the programs honest and efficient in a way they would not be under total local control. Experience with present block grant programs that turn funds over to states and cities for fairly specific purposes but with little federal oversight demonstrates this.

A recent study by the federal General Accounting Office, the watchdog of federal dollars, reports the misuse of hundreds of millions of dollars provided under the Community Development Block Grant program.

The aim of the program is to revitalize cities. But the report says the money is spread so thinly among so many localities that major problem areas get short-changed.

It reports, too, that in many cities housing rehabilitation funds were going for garages and sun decks instead of upgrading substandard housing for the poor. In one city, 15 percent of federally funded rehab loans went to people earning over $30,000.

So it is clear that the experience of block grants is that they invite local misuse of federal funds. The absence of federal targeting and controls results in costly abuse.

The real intent of block grants is the dismantling of social programs. The first step is to lump them together, giving states discretion to determine how much each program gets.

Since the block grants amount to 25 percent less than the total of the separate programs, that also means less money.

Phase Two comes when state and local governments divide up the pie. Since there is less money to go around, deserving causes are pitted against each other. Minorities, the poor, women, the handicapped, are all set in competition against each other for available funds.

Army "Golden Knights" float to the ground.

Hot air balloons fill the sky with color.

Since man's earliest moments on earth he has gazed in wonder and fascination at the birds in the skies and wished that he too could soar through the heavens.

Now his dream is reality thanks to his own ingenuity and the marvels of science. Some break free of the bonds of earth with giant balloons. Others find their way aloft with the help of gossamer wings and a friendly breeze. Still others are taken to great heights and then gracefully fall to earth beneath colorful canopies.

And still the heavens hold man spellbound, for unlike the birds he must have help to realize his dreams of flight.

PUBLIC NOTICE

ORDINANCE NO. 1274
AMENDING THE UPLAND MUNICIPAL CODE DELEGATING AUTHORITY TO THE PLANNING COMMISSION FOR DETERMINATION ON APPLICATIONS FOR CONDITIONAL USE PERMITS AND REVERSION TO ACREAGE
The City Council of the City of Upland does hereby ordain as follows:
SECTION 1: Subsection .010 of Section 9403.040 is hereby amended to read as follows:
"010 Date of hearings. All proposals for amending zone boundaries or classifications of property within such zones as are defined by this part, of the granting of Conditional Use Permits or Variances as provided herein, shall be set forth for public hearing by the secretary of the Planning Commission for hearings to be held before the Planning Commission and by the City Clerk for hearings before the City Council. The date of the first of the hearings for any Conditional Use Permit or Variance before the Planning Commission shall be not less than fifteen (15) days nor more than forty (40) days from the time of filing of such verified application or the adoption of such resolution, or the making of such motion; provided, however, the Planning Commission need not hold more than one hearing for the purpose of considering the granting of a Conditional Use Permit or Variance. In the case of any amendment to this part, the first hearing, so long as two (2) are required, or the single hearing when only one is required by an amendment to the official land use plan hereby established, shall be held not less than fifteen (15) days nor more than forty (40) days following the filing of such application, or the passage of such resolution of intention."
SECTION 2: Subsections .020 through .022 of Section 9403.040 are hereby amended to read as follows:
".020 Conditional Use Permits; findings and conditions.
".021 Findings. The Commission, before it may approve a request for a Conditional Use Permit, must make a finding by resolution as hereinafter provided, that the evidence presented shows that all of the following conditions exist:
"(Note: subsections .0211 through .0214 remain in their entirety.)
".022 Conditions to use. In the granting of an application for a Conditional Use Permit, the Commission shall have authority to require any such condition as it shall deem proper to safeguard and protect the public health, safety and general welfare, the existing and possible future uses on adjoining lands in the neighborhood and the proper handling and regulation of traffic, and to ensure the eventual development of the property with respect to which the permit is granted in accordance with such plans as may be approved in connection with the granting of the application, including but not limited to the following:
"(Note: subsections .0221 through .0224 remain in their entirety.)
".023 Actions. The first two paragraphs of Section 9403.060 "Planning Commission Actions" and subsections 9403.060.010 and 9403.060.030 are hereby amended to read as follows:
".023 SECTION 9403.060. PLANNING COMMISSION ACTIONS.
Not more than thirty-five (35) days following the final required hearing for any Zone Change, Conditional Use Permit or Variance, held before the Planning Commission, the Commission shall at a regular meeting, announce its findings by formal resolution as prescribed hereinabove. All such resolutions shall be numbered consecutively in order of their passage and shall become a permanent record of the Planning Commission.
Said resolution shall recite, among other things, the facts and reasons which, in the opinion of the Commission, make the granting or denial of the amendment, Conditional Use Permit or Variance necessary to carry out the provisions and general purpose of this part. In the case of Conditional Use Permits or Variances it shall also recite such conditions and limitations as may be imposed to serve the purpose of this part. Said findings and decisions shall be forwarded to the Council in accordance with the following provisions:
".010 Approvals by Commission. The Commission, by resolution as provided hereinabove, may recommend approval, either in whole or in part, of any amendment or Zone Change. Said resolution, including the findings and recommendations thereof, shall be forwarded to the City Council so that the Council may, if it so decides, place the amendment or Zone Change in effect through the appropriate procedures as provided hereinafter.
Approval of any Conditional Use Permit or Variance shall be final with the Commission and effective five (5) days after the date on which the Planning Commission resolution as provided hereinabove is forwarded to the Council, unless an appeal from the decision of the Commission is filed with the Council prior to said forwarding, in compliance with procedures as provided hereinafter.
"(Note: Subsections 9403.060.020 to remain in its entirety.)
".030 Failure of the Commission to act. Failure of the Commission to act on any amendment, Zone Change conditional Use Permit or Variance within thirty-five (35) days following the final required hearing for any such petition shall be deemed to constitute a disapproval of such application. An application shall be deemed to have been further action in the event of the failure of the Commission to act and when no appeal is filed with the Council within five (5) days after said time limit.
Provided, however, that in cases where the Commission may determine that uncertainty of land use policy exists, the Commission may refer the subject application to the City Council for final determination. In such cases, the Commission shall exercise its role as an advisory body and additional public hearings(s) shall be held by the City Council on such application in the manner prescribed for public hearings before said Council.
SECTION 4: The first paragraph of Section 9403.070 of the Upland Municipal Code and subsection .010 thereof are hereby amended to read as follows:
".010 SECTION 9403.070. REVIEW AND APPEALS FROM COMMISSION DECISIONS.
Any decision of the Planning Commission regarding the denial of any amendment or Zone Change or the granting or denial of any Conditional Use Permit or Variance may be appealed to the City Council by either the applicant or any other person aggrieved by such decision; provided, written notice of such appeal shall be filed with the City Council within five (5) days from the date the Commission's resolution is filed with the Council. Further, all decisions of the City Planning Commission denying amendments or Zone Changes or granting or denying Conditional Use Permits or Variances shall be subject to review by the City Council, either by appeal or upon its own motion, or upon request or the City Planning Commission.
".010 Form of appeal. Each appeal to the Council shall be in writing with a copy thereof given the Commission stating the grounds therefor and setting forth wherein the Commission failed in rendering its decision to conform to the requirements of this part."
"(Note: Subsections 9403.070.020 through .050 to remain in their entirety.)
SECTION 5: Subsection .010 of Section 9403.080 is hereby amended to read as follows:
".010 Extensions of time for compliance with conditions for approval, where circumstances beyond the control of the applicant cause delays which do not permit compliance with all conditions for approval of any Conditional Use Permit or Variance within the time limits established therefor in the resolution granting such Conditional Use Permit or Variance, the Administrative Committee, upon receipt of a proper application to said Committee for an "Administrative Determination" pertaining thereto, may grant an extension of time for such compliance subject to the following provisions:
".011 Request for any such extension of time shall be subject to all requirements and requirements for an Administrative Determination pursuant to Section 9104.080 of the Upland Municipal Code and the payment of application fees therefor.
".012 Any such application for Administrative Determination shall be submitted to the Planning Department not less than 14 days prior to the expiration date of any such Conditional Use Permit or Variance.
".013 The maximum length of time for approval of any such extension of time shall not exceed six (6) months from the original date of expiration of such permit or Variance.
".014 Committee approvals must include the following findings of fact pertaining to the request for extension:
".0141 That no substantive changes to site development standards of the affected property or its environs have occurred in the time subsequent to original approval of the subject application.
".0142 That adequate evidence of hardship exists to warrant the granting of such extension of time.
SECTION 6: Subsections .041 and .042 of Section 9503.020 are hereby amended to read as follows:
".041 Expiration. The approval or conditional approval of a tentative map shall expire twelve (12) months from the date the map was approved or conditionally approved.
".042 Extension. The Administrative Committee is hereby made the advisory agency of the Council in matters pertaining to the approval, conditional approval or denial of extensions of time for tentative maps. The person filing the tentative map may request an extension of the tentative map approval or conditional approval by written application for "Administrative Determination" by the Administrative Committee pursuant to all procedures and requirements for such determination set forth in Section 9104.080 of the Upland Municipal Code and, the payment or application fee therefor, such application to be filed with the Planning Department at least sixty (60) days before the approval or conditional approval is due to expire. The application shall state the reasons for requesting the extension. In granting an extension, new conditions may be imposed and existing conditions may be revised.
".0421 Time limit on extensions. An extension or extensions of tentative map approval or conditional approval shall not exceed an aggregate of two (2) years.
".0422 Effect of map modification on extension. Modification of a tentative map after approval, or conditional approval, shall not extend the time limits imposed by this section.
SECTION 7: Subsection .040 of Section 9506.010 is hereby amended to read as follows:
".040 Proceedings. The Planning Commission is hereby made the advisory agency of the Council, as such advisory agency is defined and established by the California Subdivision Map Act, and the powers hereby delegated to the Planning Commission to approve, conditionally approve or disapprove, and to report actions on tentative maps for reversion to acreage or the merger of separate parcels directly to the subdivider. The Planning Commission is hereby given full power and authority to investigate any and all matters pertaining to a proposed reversion of lands and make its findings of fact in relation thereto, which shall be communicated in writing to the Council. A public hearing shall be held before the Planning Commission on all petitions for initiations for reversion to acreage pursuant to all requirements for the hearing of Parcel Maps including procedures for appeals from Planning Commission determinations therefor. Notice of public hearing shall be given as provided in Section 9503.020 of the Government Code. The Planning Department may give such other notice that it deems necessary or advisable. The Planning Commission may approve a reversion to acreage only if it finds and records in writing that:
".041 Dedications or offers of dedication to be vacated or abandoned by the reversion to acreage are necessary for present or prospective public purposes; and either:
".042 The retention of all or a portion of previously paid subdivision fees, deposits or improvement securities if the same are necessary to accomplish any of the provisions of this part.
SECTION 8: This ordinance shall be signed by the Mayor, attested by the City Clerk, and published in the Upland News in pursuance to the requirements of the California Government Code.
SECTION 9: If any section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase of this ordinance shall for any reason be invalid, such holding or holdings shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of this ordinance. The City Council has declared that it would have passed this ordinance and each section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase thereof, irrespective of the fact that any one or more section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase ## or not?

You don't have to. It's purely a matter for you to decide.

This newspaper is what is called in newspaper circles, a controlled circulation newspaper. There are dozens across the country—enough even to have conventions. The purpose of a controlled circulation newspaper is to provide local news, local service and local advertising to an important, independent, interested community.

But where does your carrier come in? They are paid a minimum allowance for delivering your local newspaper. They depend on you, really for their income, because when they collect, most of it is theirs. Controlled circulation newspapers work like that, on a voluntary pay plan.

We hope you appreciate and enjoy your newspaper enough to voluntarily pay your carrier. They are dependable. They are rendering you a service. They would like to earn the money. Pay them? Think about it.
